Conference location: Rzeszów

Working Languages of the Conference: Polish, English

The aim of the conference: The conference is an attempt to present the views of representatives of legal science on a multidimensional basis on issues related to the right to property, which is being commonly perceived as a fundamental human right in contemporary democratic states. Considerations in this matter should be conducted from the point of view of, first of all, the science of constitutional law. Nevertheless, undoubtedly a valuable supplement will be the opportunity to discuss views of representatives of other branches of law, in particular civil law, but also administrative law and others. The intention of the organizers of the conference is the possibility of exchanging views by theoreticians and law practitioners, including representatives of different legal professions and judiciary.

Suggested themes of papers:

- ownership of the Constitution of the Republic of Poland and its guarantees;
- property rights on a comparative basis;
- restrictions on the right of ownership;
- infringement of the right of ownership;
- protection of property rights;
- practical aspects of the judicial protection of property rights;
- intellectual property;
- industrial property;
- ownership in the jurisprudence of the Constitutional Tribunal;
- ownership in the case law of the European Court of Human Rights.
