

Aleksandra Pelczar

Aleksandra Pelczar - Master of Law and a Master of Economics, certification as a mediator. Assistant at the Criminology and Suicidology Department of the University of Rzeszów. Active membership in the Polish Society of Criminalistics facilitates engagement in scientific and educational initiatives. Mediation expertise supports processes in conflict resolution. Practical experience includes work in a law firm, specializing in criminal, family, and civil law. Research interests center on criminology, with a specific emphasis on studies involving children as victims of crime. Additional specialization focuses on cybercrime and the application of artificial intelligence in Forensic Science, emphasizing the analysis and prevention of digital crimes. In line with these interests, she is currently expanding her expertise through professional training in artificial intelligence to deeper understand its evolving role in modern security. The strategic development and implementation of AI systems remain central to her current research focus and academic passion.