

Alik Guchua

Alik Guchua – Associate Professor, of International Relations and International Security, is a PhD in Political Science. In 2018-2020 He did PhD in Political Sciences at Caucasus International University and defended his PhD thesis successfully. In 2020 He was awarded Doctor's Degree in Political Sciences.

Alik Guchua has extensive experience of working at various universities as a lecturer and teaching students various courses in Social Sciences. In Currently, Alik Guchua works at Caucasus International University. He is head of the Bachelor Degree Program in International Relations, Deputy Dean of the Faculty of Social Sciences and Humanities, Caucasus International University (Georgia) and an Associate Professor of International Relations and International Security. Head of the Strategic Studies Institute for Research Chemical, Biological, Radiological and Nuclear Threats (Georgia). Executive Director of the Institute of Geostrategy and Euro-Atlantic Integration of Georgia. Executive Director of Young Experts Association (Georgia). His research interests include weapons of mass destruction, conflict, cyber terrorism, asymmetric threats, human rights, armed conflicts, war studies, hybrid threats, NATO security policy, nuclear security and global security.