

Arkadiusz Jan Sójka

Arkadiusz Jan Sójka, PhD – political scientist and manager, Assistant Professor at the Faculty of Law and Security of the Jacob of Paradies University in Gorzów Wielkopolski, and lecturer at the Faculty of Political Science and Journalism of Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznań. He graduated in political science and completed postgraduate studies in European and European Union Studies at the Institute of Political Science and Journalism, Adam Mickiewicz University. He received his PhD in social sciences in 2021 with a dissertation entitled “The Arctic in the Environmental Policy of the European Union, 1996–2018.”

Co-founder of the Centre for European Research and Education. Member of the Polish Association for European Studies, the Polish Political Science Association, and the Polish International Studies Association.

His research focuses on ecology, as well as the European Union’s environmental and climate policy, with particular emphasis on European integration, the Arctic, and environmental security. His academic interests also include environmentalism and the relationship between climate policy and security.