

Daryna Kharuk

Daryna Kharuk is a Ph.D. candidate in Politics and Administration Studies at the University of Opole, Poland. Her academic interests include civil society resilience during wartime, NGO–government relations, democratic resilience, memory politics, and Central and Eastern European politics. She pays particular attention to Ukraine since 2014, especially the role of civil society organisations in supporting the military, sustaining democratic participation, and responding to crisis conditions. She is the author of scholarly and public-oriented publications on Ukrainian civil society, Euromaidan, and the Revolution of Dignity.
