

Eka Beraia

Dr. Eka Beraia, Associate Professor, is a Georgian scholar specializing in American Studies, international relations, and security studies. She holds a Ph.D. in Education and Humanities from the International Black Sea University.

She serves as an Associate Professor and a lecturer at Caucasus International University, where she teaches, mentors students, and contributes to curriculum development. Her academic expertise includes U.S. foreign policy, asymmetric and hybrid warfare, migration, and regional security, with a focus on Georgia and the South Caucasus.

Dr. Beraia has an extensive publication record on geopolitical challenges, Russian information warfare, and transnational security issues, and she actively participates in international academic conferences on global security and human rights.