

Ilaria Bruner

Ilaria Bruner is a PhD candidate in Public Policies for Cohesion and Convergence in the European Scenario at the Department of Political Science, University of Naples Federico II, where she graduated with distinction in International Relations. Her research interests lie at the intersection of digital geographies and innovation processes, with a specific focus on the experimental use of cartography and emerging digital tools for territorial analysis and representation.